

Citing Sources in APA 7th Edition

A Quick Guide for Research 10 Papers

Prepared for: Research 10 - Acacia

Keep this beside you whenever you draft or edit your paper.

1. Why We Cite

Citation protects you from plagiarism, lets readers verify your sources, and credits the researchers whose work you built on. In research papers, EVERY borrowed idea needs citation - not only direct quotations. If you paraphrase a study's finding in your own words, you still cite it.

2. In-Text Citations

- Paraphrase, one author: Reading daily improves vocabulary (Santos, 2023).
- Quotation with page number: "Reading is exercise for the brain" (Santos, 2023, p. 14).
- Narrative form: Santos (2023) found that daily reading improves vocabulary.
- Two authors: always list both - (Lim & Reyes, 2022).
- Three or more authors: use et al. from the first citation - (Aquino et al., 2024).
- Organization as author: (Department of Education [DepEd], 2020), then (DepEd, 2020) after.

3. Reference List Rules

- Start on a new page titled References, centered and bold.
- Arrange entries alphabetically by the first author's surname.
- Use a hanging indent: first line flush left, following lines indented half an inch.
- Include the DOI when available, formatted as <https://doi.org/xxxx>.

4. Common Formats

Book: Santos, R. (2023). Reading habits of Filipino teenagers. National Book Press.

5. Quick Self-Check Before Submission

- Does every in-text citation appear in the reference list, and vice versa?
- Are all reference entries alphabetized with hanging indents?
- Are direct quotes under 40 words enclosed in quotation marks with a page number?
- Did you cite yourself honestly - no recycled work from previous years?
